ABERDEEN, Ohio | Police detectives are investigating the suspicious death of a woman who was found in her home in Aberdeen Monday evening, according to Aberdeen Police Department reports.

APD Officer Jacob Goodwin said he would not release the name of the 44-year-old woman who was found dead by two people at 1826 Stivers Road, until all of her family members are notified.

The Ledger Independent learned late Friday that the woman had been identified as Marilyn Hafer McCord although police could not confirm that information.

Responding to a call from 911 communications at about 7:20 p.m., Goodwin said he arrived on the scene to find two people and the body of a woman who had been dead for several hours.

Through an agreement with the state, the property formerly known as the location of Holland/McFarland Chevrolet will become the property of the Mason County School District.

The Kentucky Education and Workforce Development Cabinet has retained ownership of the property located at 668 Kenton Station, but on Thursday, paperwork will be signed giving ownership to the school district.

The building currently houses the auto mechanic school as part of the Mason County Area Technical Center and also contains an enclosed parking lot.

Mason County Board of Education members voted to accept the property from the state Monday night.

"It's a good deal for Mason County," said Superintendent Tim Moore of the transfer, which costs the school district nothing except maintenance expense.

The auto mechanic school will remain in the building, but future use of the property could include using the enclosed parking lot and two-bay garage at the rear as a bus garage for the district.

Associate Superintendent Kelly Middleton said the building contains a large room that could be used as

Memorial plans in Kentucky General Assembly committee

WENDY MITCHELL

FRANKFORT | Supported by Kentucky House of Representatives, HB 256, an attempt to establish an Iraq/Afghanistan War Memorial site in Kentucky, passed from the House on Feb. 24 and into the Kentucky Senate on Feb. 29, in the current session of the Kentucky General Assembly.

According to a spokesperson in the office of co-sponsor Rep. Tom McKee, the bill is in the Veterans, Military Affairs and Public Protection committee of the Senate, at this time.

McKee, who represents the 78th District, including Robertson County, and Rep. Mike Denham, who represents the 70th District, including Mason, Bracken, and Fleming counties, co-sponsored the bill as a homage to Kentuckians who have served or lost their lives in service the United States during Operation Desert Storm, Operation Iraqi Freedom and/or Operation Enduring Freedom.

If HB256 is adopted, it would establish a committee which would include the governor, the Kentucky secretary of Tourism, Arts and Heritage Cabinet, a commissioner of the Kentucky Department of Veterans' Affairs, the Adjutant General of the Kentucky Department of Military Affairs and a member

Feds, Fla. probe teen's shooting by watch captain

SANFORD, Fla. | An unarmed black teenager shot to death by a neighborhood watch captain told his girlfriend he was being followed shortly before the confrontation that killed him, a lawyer said Tuesday as federal and state prosecutors announced they would investigate.

"Oh he's right behind me, he's right behind me again," 17-year-old Trayvon Martin told his girlfriend on the phone, the Martin family's attorney said.

The girl later heard Martin say, "Why are you following me?" Another man asked, "What are you doing around here?" attorney Benjamin Crump said.

The phone call that recorded Martin's final moments was disclosed as the U.S. Justice Department opened a federal civil rights probe into the Feb. 26 shooting and the local prosecutor convened a grand jury to investigate.

The neighborhood watch captain, George Zimmerman, has not been charged and has said he shot Martin, who was returning to a gated community in Sanford after buying candy at a convenience store, in self-defense after Martin attacked him.

names to appear on the memorial. In the Buffalo Trace region, at least six families have experienced the kind of loss the memorial is intended to address, officials said.

HB256 would also create a new section of Kentucky Revised Statutes known as the Iraq/Afghanistan War Memorial Fund, addressing public and private donations, grants, federal funds and any public or private funds earmarked for the project. According to the current version of HB 256, accumulated funds would be used for the establishment of the memorial and excess funds will be carried over, year-to-year, and interest earnings would become part of the fund and “shall not be appropriated or transferred by the General Assembly for any other purposes.”

Police say Zimmerman is white; his family says he is Hispanic. The case has ignited racial tensions in this Orlando suburb of 53,500 people, sparking rallies and a protest in Gov. Rick Scott's office on Tuesday. The Rev. Al Sharpton is joining Sanford city leaders at a town hall meeting later Tuesday to discuss the investigation. Police say Zimmerman was bleeding from his nose and the back of his head, and told police he had yelled out for help before he shot Martin. Crump told reporters Tuesday it was Martin who cried out when a man bearing a 9mm handgun came at him. Martin called his 16-year-old girlfriend in Miami several times on Feb. 26, including just before the shooting, Crump said. The discovery of the lengthy conversations, including one moments before the shooting, was made over the weekend by Martin's father by checking his son's cell phone log, Crump said.

“She absolutely blows Zimmerman's absurd self-defense claim out of the water,” Crump said of Martin's girlfriend, whose name was withheld. Martin told the girl on his way back from the store he'd taken shelter the rain briefly at an apartment building in the gated community where his father lives, Crump said. Martin then told the girl he was being followed and would try to lose the person, Crump said. “She says: ‘Run.’ He says, ‘I'm not going to run, I'm just going to walk fast,’” Crump says, quoting the girl. After Martin encountered Zimmerman, the girl thinks she heard a scuffle “because his voice changes like something interrupted his speech,” Crump said. The phone call ended before the girl heard gunshots. The last call was at 7:12 p.m. Police arrived at 7:17 p.m. to find Martin lying face down on the ground. Zimmerman was handcuffed after police arrived and taken into custody for questioning, but was released by police without being charged. Crump called the treatment patently unfair and asked if Martin would have received the same treatment if he had been the shooter. “We will not rest until he is arrested. The more time that passes, this is going to be swept under the rug,” Crump said. Crump said he plans to turn over information about the call to federal investigators; a grand jury in Seminole County is also likely to subpoena the records. The Florida Department of Law Enforcement is also involved in the state case. Former federal prosecutors said there are limitations to a Justice Department civil rights probe, which typically would involve a sworn law enforcement officer accused of abusing his authority. In this case, they said, it's not clear whether Zimmerman had any actual law enforcement authority or if the Sanford Police Department did anything improper. “I think the community has the feeling that there's some type of cover-up,” said Jeffrey Sroman, former U.S. attorney in Miami. “At least the department's involvement makes sure it gets some review. He wasn't a police officer.

Shawn Newman. “As more family members arrived on the scene, a verbal argument began with accusations of foul play. Based on those accusations, some other things, and no apparent trauma to the body of the deceased, we decided to call in Ohio Bureau of Criminal Identification and Investigation unit to assist us,” Goodwin said. Three investigators from OBCII arrived at about 11:30 p.m. “We called in OBCII, so a thorough investigation will be done. They assisted with interviews and with collecting evidence at the crime scene. This special crime investigation unit for Ohio has more resources to investigate an unknown cause of death like we found tonight,” Newman said. Brown County Coroner Timothy McKinley was also at the scene. The body was transported to Montgomery County coroner's office for an autopsy, Newman said. “A toxicology report to determine if a substance killed her usually takes several weeks from an autopsy,” Newman said. There were indications narcotics activity in the home, Newman said. “There were no visible signs of trauma to the body, and no signs of forced entry into the home. Two subjects were interviewed that were not from Aberdeen. The deceased had lived in Aberdeen for more than 10 years; she had been renting the house from her mother,” Goodwin said. No further information was available late Tuesday.

DOCTOR SAYS PATIENTS WOULD TRAVEL FOR PAIN MEDICATIONS

BRETT BARROUQUERE
Associated Press

LEXINGTON | A doctor who worked for an indicted pain clinic owner testified Tuesday that patients would travel as much as 16 hours to be treated but frequently didn't face scrutiny or background checks before being prescribed potentially addictive medications.

Dr. Robert Marshall of Lafayette, La., testified that it was difficult for doctors at Urgent Care Services to tell whether a patient was being truthful about symptoms and did little to check a patient's reason for making daylong journeys to the clinic. Marshall, who's not charged in the case, said that patients caught lying were discharged, but that catching them could be difficult.

"The problem is that if they're lying to me and I haven't caught it, I don't know," said Marshall, who worked at the Urgent Care Services clinic in Lafayette.

Marshall testified at the trial of 46-year-old Michael Leman of Slidell, La., and two of his businesses, Urgent Care Services of Philadelphia and Urgent Care Services of Cincinnati.

FRANKFORT | A Kentucky watchdog group has criticized personal care homes across the state after a survey of residents showed they feel that they lack a community atmosphere and meaningful activities.

The Courier-Journal and the Lexington Herald-Leader report Kentucky Protection and Advocacy surveyed 218 residents at 20 personal care homes in Kentucky before releasing its findings Monday.

The group's report says residents, who are mostly mentally disabled, aren't able to fully communicate with non-disabled people and feel isolated from the communities where they live.

"Most residents indicated they wanted to participate in the same activities as individuals," the report said.

DAYTON, Ohio | Ohio leads the nation in property insurance claims for the theft of copper and other metals, an industry-supported organization that fights insurance fraud says.

The National Insurance Crime Bureau says Ohio property owners made 2,398 such claims during the three-year period from 2009 through 2011. Nationwide, such claims broke the 25,000

Texas ranked second in the number of metals theft claims, followed by Georgia, California and Illinois. The bureau listed the top metro areas for such claims as Chicago, New York, Atlanta, Dallas-Fort Worth and Detroit.

CINCINNATI SUPERINTENDENT SALARY TO BE CUT IN HALF

CINCINNATI | The Cincinnati Board of Education says it aims to rehire its superintendent at half her current salary in an effort to close an expected $43 million budget gap.

The board on Monday approved an agreement that says Superintendent Mary Ronan will retire her $189,000-per-year job and be rehired for $99,000 annually through July 2015. The board also approved the layoffs of 40 administrators as it seeks to balance the annual budget that goes into effect mid-year.

Ronan says the layoffs are "painful but necessary" and blames school funding reductions made at the federal, state and local levels.

She says the district has closed schools, eliminated about 1,300 positions and reorganized over the past 10 years but that "other governments have balanced their own budgets on our students' backs." — AP

Somalis face sex trafficking trial in Nashville

MORE THAN A DOZEN TO BE TRIED

KRISTIN M. HALL
Associated Press

NASHVILLE, Tenn. | More than a dozen people accused in a sex trafficking ring run by Somali gangs that reached from Minnesota to Tennessee are facing trial in Nashville.

Out of the total 30 who were indicted, 15 are going to trial this week on charges of conspiracy to commit sexual trafficking of children by force, fraud or coercion and charges related to the sexual trafficking of two unidentified juvenile females, which prosecutors say were ages 14 or younger at the time of the offenses.

Jury selection is scheduled to begin on Tuesday and the trial is expected to last about two months.

The indictment, which was originally unsealed in 2010 and amended by a superseding indictment in 2011, says the defendants, many of them from the Somali immigrant communities in Minneapolis and Nashville, were members or associates of three gangs called the Somali Outlaws, the Somali Mafia and the Lady Outlaws. The gang members are accused of forcing teenage girls into prostitution and operated in St. Paul; Minneapolis; Columbus, Ohio, and Nashville. Four unidentified female victims are listed in the indictment.

The indictment accuses the gangs of finding and recruiting young girls, some also Somali, for the purpose of prostitution in exchange for money and drugs between 2000 and 2010.

The indictment lists instances in which a young Somali girl, identified as Jane Doe (hash)1, was taken from Minneapolis to Nashville and Columbus to have sex with gang members and others.

The indictment says that another young Somali girl, Jane Doe (hash)2, was told that using her for prostitution was referred to as a “mission” and other gang members wouldn’t be charged to have sex with her. Some of the victims are expected to testify during the trial.

Many of the defendants have remained in federal custody since their arrests in 2010 and all 15 are represented by separate defense attorneys.

The defendants are Abdifatah Jama Adan, Ahmad Abdulnasir Ahmad, Musse Ahmed Ali, Hassan Ahmed Dahir, Faduma Mohamed Farah, Idris Ibrahim Fahra, Abdullahi Hashi, Fatah Haji Hashi, Abdirahman Abderazak Hersi, Dahir Nor Ibrahim, Abdifatah Bashir Jama, Andrew Kayachith, Fuad Faisal Nur, Yasin Abdirhman Yusuf and Mohamed Ahmed Amalle.

The trial could involve about two hundred witnesses including many who are being brought down from Minnesota. U.S. District Court Judge William J. Haynes is allowing the defendants to take scheduled Muslim prayer breaks during the proceedings.

Most of the defense attorneys declined to comment before the trial, but some said they expected this to be a complicated trial for both the attorneys and the jurors.

A proposed questionnaire for potential jurors includes questions about opinions about Somalis, immigrants and recent protests over the building of mosques in Murfreesboro and New York City.

Attorney David Cooper, who is representing Abdullahi Hashi, said the case involves hot-button issues and there was significant news coverage of the indictment and arrests.

His client, who has been in jail since December 2010, maintains his innocence against the accusations, Cooper said.

“It may be difficult to seat a jury in this case,” he said.

Along with sex trafficking, the indictment charges some of the defendants with conspiring to obstruct the investigation by lying to a federal grand jury.

It also alleges some stole a motor vehicle, committed burglaries, and engaged in credit card fraud.

Those counts and some of the defendants were separated from the current trial and will be heard in court on a later date.

A Tennessee Bureau of Investigation report last year indicated that human sex trafficking was widespread in the state and better laws and training were needed to address the problem.

SOLDIER DAD MEETS TWINS WHO ARRIVED EARLY

MIDDLESBORO | Army soldier Craig Lewis had planned to take leave and return home to eastern Kentucky for the birth of his twin sons — but they came earlier than expected.

Megan Lewis wasn’t due until April 5. She told WYMT-TV that her water broke a month early and it was impossible for her husband to make it to Middlesboro Appalachian Regional Hospital to see Michael and Ezekiel born.

However, Pfc. Lewis was able to get leave and made it home on March 12, just a few days after the boys were born. He changed his first diaper on the way home from the airport.

Megan Lewis said even though her husband had been deployed for seven months before the babies came, he wasn’t a stranger to them.

“They know his voice; they had not heard his voice in so long and that’s what I was scared of,” she said.

Craig Lewis said the first thing he noticed about his twins was their size — they each weighed in at just more than 5 pounds.

“They are so itty bitty,” he said.

FROM A3

Leman and the two businesses are charged with conspiracy to distribute controlled substances and conspiracy to launder funds.

An indictment says Leman conspired with several of his employees to prescribe methadone and oxycodone to bogus patients who were working with drug dealers to distribute them in eastern Kentucky.

Authorities say runners would travel from Kentucky to Louisiana, Pennsylvania and Ohio to pick up prescriptions for drugs that would be distributed in areas such as Pike and Floyd counties from 2004 through 2008.

Leman’s attorney said previously that the doctors were overprescribing drugs on their own and staff members were making side deals with patients without Leman’s involvement.

The clinic CEO and a clinic nurse are awaiting sentencing. Two doctors pleaded guilty and served four years in prison.

Marshall’s testimony came after attorney Glenn Burns, who represents the clinics, told jurors that the clinics were properly run.

“Mr. Leman started this business because he wanted to do it right,” Burns said.

Burns asked Marshall about how the clinic functioned and what measures were in place to cut off patients suspected of abusing prescription drugs. Marshall cited three patients from Kentucky who were dismissed from treatment.

Under questioning from Assistant U.S. Attorney Roger West, Marshall testified that from 2005, when he started with the clinic in Lafayette, through about 2007, patients faced no questions about their backgrounds.

Marshall also testified that he did not personally check to see if a patient had been kicked out of another Urgent Care facility before prescribing methadone or another powerful drug.

“I rely on my staff to do their jobs, as you do,” Marshall said.

“Let’s not talk about my staff,” West responded. “I think they do a wonderful job.”

West asked Marshall about a patient from Prestonsburg, Ky., who drove 16 hours to Lafayette, La., to get pain medication from Urgent Care Services in 2005 and 2006. The patient had been barred from an Urgent Care Services facility in Slidell, La., in February 2005.

Marshall said he was unaware the patient had been dismissed and understood the man was on a work assignment in Lafayette. Marshall said the man was prescribed methadone to be taken four to five times a day, but that he was being weaned off the medication because of addiction issues.

West said the patient’s file didn’t note any addiction issues.

“The documentation is not the best in the world, I admit that,” Marshall said.

When the patient was barred from the Lafayette facility, the letter terminating his care was sent to eastern Kentucky. West asked if there had been documentation — such as an address or phone number — to show the man was living in Lafayette temporarily.

“When you go on a trip, do you put the address of the hotel you are staying in?” Marshall asked.

“I’m not a drug trafficker driving 12 hours to pick up medication,” West responded.

The manager of multiple pain clinics, Frederick Fuoco of New Orleans, testified that the clinics don’t generally take insurance.

“Do you recall the primary method of payment?” West asked.

“There was no insurance. It was cash or credit card,” said Fuoco, who made $175,000 last year as president of Urgent Care Services.

Eye to Eye

with David Blandford, M.D.

FARSIGHTED BENEVOLENCE

While the clear, dome-shaped cornea that covers the front of the eye responds well to minor injury and abrasion, scarring and severe disease can take a greater toll. As a result, about 40,000 corneal transplants are performed each year in the United States. This surgery involves removing the central portion of the damaged cornea and replacing it with donor tissue. Thanks to technological advances, the success rate of corneal transplants is about 95 percent. However, without the generosity of donors, many people with diseased or damaged corneas cannot avail themselves of the opportunity to see again. There is no substitute for human corneal tissue. If you want to save someone's sight, contact an eye bank near you.

METAL

FROM A3

Thefts are spurred by high prices for copper and other metals in a struggling economy. Thieves cause millions of dollars in losses by ripping away air conditioners, plumbing and cables.

“Beginning in August, 2009, thefts steadily increased across the nation driven, once again, by rising prices for base metals, especially copper,” the crime bureau said.

Last week, the Ohio Senate passed a bill to curb such thefts. The bill says dealers cannot buy from anyone who refuses to be photographed and must keep the photographs for 60 days.

In Cincinnati, rules regulating scrap metal sellers are being challenged in court. Owners of two scrap yards filed the challenge last month, saying their businesses would be harmed by proposals requiring permits, background checks, licensing and additional record-keeping.

The crime bureau says an alert neighborhood is the best way to fight metals thefts.

“Your best protection is simply paying attention. Talk with your neighbors and ask one that you trust to keep watch on your home if you will be away, and return the favor,” the bureau says.

Lt. Charley Stepp of the Greene County Sheriff’s Office agreed. “Just be diligent and keep your property locked up,” he told the Dayton Daily News.

The bureau notes that comprehensive data is hard to track because some thefts don’t result in an insurance claim or even a police report.

PERSONAL CARE

FROM A3

“They wanted to go shopping, to restaurants, to the gym, to church, to the library, go fishing, go to school, spend time with family and friends, and seek employment.”

Kentucky Protection and Advocacy Director Marsha Hockensmith says the report shows the need to “find a better way” to serve those residents. There are 80 such homes across the state.

“Personal care homes fail to integrate persons with disabilities into the social mainstream, fail to promote equality of opportunity, and fail to maximize individual choice,” the report said. “They restrict community and integration and interactions with individuals who do not have a disability.”

In response, Kentucky Association of Health Care Facilities President Ruby Jo Cummins Lubarsky said personal care homes provide services that are valuable and needed.

“These homes are licensed health care facilities regulated by the Office of the Inspector General within the Cabinet for Health and Family Services. Personal care homes must maintain compliance with state laws and regulations in order to maintain their license to operate in Kentucky,” Lubarsky said. “In addition to the regulatory environment that personal care homes operate, these homes receive limited income to meet the needs of the individuals they serve.”

She said her group continues to work with state officials to “seek ways to evolve Kentucky’s personal care home program.”

A majority of those surveyed — 78 percent — said they had a mental illness, while 10 percent reported having an intellectual or developmental disability and 8 percent had both. The other 4 percent said they did not have a mental disability.

The Cabinet for Health and Family Services inspects and licenses personal care homes, and agency spokeswoman Jill Midkiff said there’s not an easy solution.

“The issues surrounding residents in personal care homes are complex, and we continue to work to find ways to meet the needs of these vulnerable citizens,” she said.

Jack Simpson operates five personal care homes in western Kentucky and says the facilities may appear like institutions, but they provide quality care at a reasonable price.

“It’s basic math and it serves the state better than any other program they’ve got,” Simpson said.

Could a U.S. Demjanjuk grave become neo-Nazi shrine?

THOMAS J. SHEERAN
Associated Press

CLEVELAND | If relatives of convicted Nazi war criminal John Demjanjuk get what they want, their patriarch will be buried in suburban Cleveland — a prospect not sitting well with Jewish advocates who argue the retired autoworker could, in death, become a magnet for neo-Nazis.

Demjanjuk died Saturday in Germany at age 91, and his family in Seven Hills, Ohio, wants to return his body for burial. Even though his U.S. citizenship had been revoked and he was deported, there is no prohibition against returning the body to this country, the U.S. attorney's office in Cleveland said.

Munich state court spokeswoman Margarete Noetzel said Tuesday that under German law, because Demjanjuk died before his final appeal could be heard and because a person is presumed innocent until proven guilty, he is still technically presumed innocent.

But, she said, that doesn't mean the conviction is somehow wiped from the record. "The verdict exists — it is not voided. It was pronounced and based in fact."

A Demjanjuk funeral in his adopted hometown would turn into a spectacle, said Efraim Zuroff, who leads the Nazi-hunting Simon Wiesenthal Center in Jerusalem.

"I have no doubt that a funeral in Seven Hills would turn into a demonstration of solidarity and support for Demjanjuk, who's the last person on earth who deserves any sympathy, frankly," Zuroff said in a telephone interview.

Demjanjuk had guarded his privacy carefully, posting a "no trespassing" sign outside his house and turning aside interview requests over the decades.

His attorney appealed Monday to German authorities to arrange for his body to be sent home to Ohio, and son John Demjanjuk Jr. confirmed that, but there was no word on any arrangements or whether a funeral might be done in secret.

John Demjanjuk Jr. said in an email Tuesday that any suggestion of his father's burial or gravesite turning into a spectacle was unwarranted.

"Over the past 35 plus years our family has had NO association with any part of the neo-Nazi groups, ever. We have condemned Nazi crimes as my father is himself a victim of the Nazis regardless of whose version of the case you believe," he said.

Demjanjuk's attorney, Ulrich Busch, said in an email Monday night that a focus on his client overlooked the role of Germany in war crimes.

"It is a fact that the media knows who the true murderers of Sobibor are, namely the Germans. It is not understandable why the media keeps silent about them and their non-conviction," he said.

The Ukraine-born Demjanjuk was a retired U.S. autoworker who maintained over three decades of legal battles that he had been mistaken for someone else.

He came to the U.S. on Feb. 9, 1952, claiming to have spent much of World War II in a German prisoner of war camp. He eventually settled in the middle-class Cleveland suburb of Seven Hills and worked as a mechanic at Ford Motor Co.'s engine plant in nearby Brook Park.

That idyll ended in 1977, when the Justice Department alleged that he had hid his past as the feared Treblinka death camp guard "Ivan the Terrible" and revoked his citizenship. The Israeli Supreme Court returned him to the U.S. after it received evidence that another Ukrainian, not Demjanjuk, was Ivan the Terrible.

Eventually, after many legal twists and turns, Demjanjuk was convicted in May of 28,060 counts of being an accessory to murder at the Sobibor death camp in occupied Poland and sentenced to five years in prison. He died in a nursing home while awaiting appeal.

A U.S. burial site for Demjanjuk could become a shrine for neo-Nazis in the U.S. because they will never forget he was once misidentified as Ivan the Terrible, said Mark Potok, senior fellow at the Southern Poverty Law Center, noting that there are about 170 active neo-Nazi groups in the U.S.

"For neo-Nazis, I think it's entirely possible that a Demjanjuk grave becomes a monument to the alleged evils of the Jews," Potok said.

In Germany, the bones of Rudolf Hess, a deputy to Adolf Hitler, were exhumed under cover of darkness, burned and secretly scattered at sea after his grave became a shrine for thousands of neo-Nazis.

Rabbi Marvin Hier, founder of the Wiesenthal Center in Los Angeles, said Demjanjuk didn't have the stature that would attract adoring neo-Nazis to his grave.

"He's not an Adolf Hitler," Hier said.

Any hometown burial arrangements likely would be at Demjanjuk's longtime church, St. Vladimir Ukrainian Orthodox Cathedral in nearby Parma. Parishioners and the wider Ukrainian-American community had been a protective cocoon of support for Demjanjuk for decades.

The church signaled Sunday that it was holding out hope his name might be cleared. Just as Demjanjuk's conviction as Ivan the Terrible had been overturned, "so, too, in time, we believe that new evidence will be uncovered once again finding him innocent of the latest accusations," the cathedral said in a statement.

"Our parish and the Ukrainian community have always supported Mr. Demjanjuk and his claim of innocence of committing the crimes of which he was accused," the cathedral statement said. There was no mention of burial plans.

The U.S. Department of Justice, whose Nazi-hunting office directed the pursuit of Demjanjuk in the U.S., declined to comment Monday on the burial issue.

A U.S. State Department spokeswoman, Victoria Nuland, said the U.S. Consulate General in Munich "is providing consular assistance to Mr. Demjanjuk's family in the United States." There was no elaboration, but such help could include repatriation of remains.

Hier said it might be hard to find a cemetery that would accept Demjanjuk.

"If it were me or my family, I wouldn't want to have anyone buried near a Nazi war criminal," he said. "They are a disgrace to mankind."

Fleming County home to two roadside markets

Fleming County is home to two of the 106 markets across the commonwealth recently accepted into the 2012 Kentucky Farm Bureau Certified Roadside Farm Market Program. The Fleming County members are: Hutton-Loyd Tree Farm and McLean's Aero-fresh Fruit.

In joining the Kentucky Farm Bureau Certified Roadside Farm Market Program, these markets have committed to offering quality products and service to their customers. Their acceptance by Farm Bureau tells customers that they meet the highest standards of quality, freshness, and marketing appeal.

Hutton-Loyd Tree Farm offers both wholesale and retail nursery products and a membership fishing club year round. During the Christmas holidays Hutton-Loyd's "cut and choose" Christmas tree operation is open for business, offering the area's freshest holiday decorations and their farm-fresh value added products; Elderberry Jelly etc. at their farm market at 1483 Big Run Road in Wallingford. For more information on Hutton-Loyd Tree Farm call 606-876-3423 or visit their website at hl-treefarm.com.

McLean's Aerofresh Fruit offers a wide variety of seasonal fruits and vegetables from July to November at their market on Ewing Road in Ewing. In the fall McLean's also offers orchard tours and family fun activities at the orchard. For more information on McLean's Aerofresh Fruit call 606-782-1112 or email mmlmclean55@yahoo.com.

"The Certified Roadside Farm Market Program was established to help our farmers generate local interest in the wide array of products they produce on the family farm," said Mark Haney, president of Kentucky Farm Bureau. "Along with promotional efforts designed to attract consumers, the program also partners with farm market owners to educate the public about the importance of locally grown and produced products."

Brochures that list all of the Certified Roadside Farm Markets across the state are available at Kentucky welcome centers, state resort parks, local chambers of commerce/tourism centers and county Farm Bureau offices. Consumers can also go to the 2012 Certified Roadside Farm Market website — kyfb.com/roadside — for a complete list of markets. ## WALL STREET

WORRY ABOUT CHINESE DEMAND DRIVES U.S. STOCKS LOWER

Stocks sank Tuesday on Wall Street after two reports suggested an economic slowdown in China, where blistering growth over the past three years has helped sustain the global economic recovery.

Home prices dropped in 45 Chinese cities last month, a result of government policies designed to reduce property speculation. And BHP Billiton, a world leader in mining, said it expects weaker Chinese demand for iron ore, used in steelmaking.

In the United States, stocks recovered some of their early loss but still appeared headed for their worst performance in two weeks.

Just before 3 p.m. EDT, the Dow Jones industrial average was down 53 points at 13,189. The Standard & Poor's 500 index was down four points at 1,406. The Nasdaq composite index was down eight at 3,070.

Brian Gendreau, a market strategist at the brokerage Cetera Financial Group, said traders were concerned about slower growth in India and Brazil as well. That could restrain a rally that has driven the S&P up almost 12 percent this year.

"If there were skeptics out there that the market might have gotten a little ahead of itself, this was all the news they needed," Gendreau said.

Caterpillar, the maker of heavy equipment, led the Dow lower, sliding 2.9 percent after it said global sales are growing more slowly. Bank of America, by far the most heavily traded stock, led the Dow higher with a 1.7 percent gain.

Mining companies, which rely on rising demand from the developing world, plunged. Peabody Energy fell 5 percent, Cliffs Natural Resources 3 percent and U.S. Steel 2 percent. Energy companies were the worst-performing group in the S&P 500.

Yields for U.S. government debt fell slightly after rising for nine consecutive days. The yield on the 10-year Treasury note dropped to 2.33 percent, from 2.36 late Monday, but had recovered to 2.36 percent later Tuesday.

The dollar rose against the euro. Traders tend to buy what they consider safer currencies, such as the dollar, when they are worried about the global economy. The euro fell to $1.3218 from $1.3238 late Monday.

The U.S. Commerce Department released a mixed report on the housing market. Builders broke ground on fewer homes in February, though they obtained more permits to build homes later in the year.

Gendreau said the report's impact on trading was mild because most housing data in recent months have signaled a modest revival for the industry. — AP

First State bankers meet with policy makers

First State Bank's Mike Pell and Tim Grooms recently returned from Washington, D.C., where they met with legislators and regulators to discuss how recent banking proposals have impacted Ohio.

Pell and Grooms were two of 55 bankers who visited the nation's capital to voice the concerns of the financial services industry on behalf of the Ohio Bankers Association and the American Bankers Association.

Pell and Grooms visited the offices of Congresswoman Jean Schmidt, Congressman Michael Turner, and Senator Rob Portman, as well as regulators including the FDIC, Federal Reserve, and Consumer Financial Protection Bureau to discuss the local economy as well as banking issues that can impact our local communities.

"Traditional banking is the engine that will drive our communities across Ohio into a strong economic future," Pell said. "This was my opportunity to influence policy decisions made in Washington and also gather information that can help us meet the challenges we face locally."

More than 1,500 bankers visit Washington annually as part of the Washington Visit Program. The state bankers associations, in conjunction with the ABA, schedule briefings with the federal financial services regulatory agencies and visit the state's congressional delegation to educate them on issues before Congress that will impact the banking industry.

First State Bank is a privately owned financial institution with eight offices in Adams County and Brown County, Ohio. First State has assets of $240 million and over 70 full time employees.

Gov't requires new labels for hazardous chemicals

SAM HANANEL
Associated Press

WASHINGTON | The Obama administration announced long-awaited regulations Tuesday to improve labels on hazardous chemicals and make them conform with international guidelines developed by the United Nations.

The Occupational Safety and Health Administration estimated that such labels could prevent more than 40 deaths and about 500 workplace injuries and illnesses from exposure to hazardous chemicals each year.

Assistant Labor Secretary David Michaels said labels will be easier to understand and less confusing, especially for low-literacy workers. About 43 million U.S. workers come in contact with hazardous materials on the job.

The process of developing the rules began during the Bush administration, and the rules were initially proposed more than two years ago. The Obama administration is holding them out as a product of a presidential directive last year to streamline burdensome agency regulations and eliminate red tape.

OSHA officials said the latest rules would actually save companies more than $475 million annually in training costs and paperwork. Chemical manufacturers currently have to produce two sets of labels and records: one to satisfy U.S. standards and another to meet the U.N. guidelines.

Kentucky players share the wealth on offense

COLIN FLY
Associated Press

LEXINGTON | Every player in Kentucky's seven-man rotation has led the Wildcats in scoring this season.

Their balance forces opponents to pick which player to try and stop and who to make beat them.

Kentucky coach John Calipari has a pretty good idea what counterpart Tom Crean will try when Indiana (27-8) meets the Wildcats (34-2) on Friday in the South Regional semifinals in Atlanta. He thinks the Hoosiers plan will force point guard Marquis Teague and forward Michael Kidd-Gilchrist to carry the offense.

"What Indiana is going to do is they are going to back off of Teague and back off of Michael Gilchrist. The only issue is it's dangerous because we've all seen those guys have big games," Calipari said Tuesday. "What you're hoping is we'll let's hope that they're not making shots. That's what I think that they would do."

The Hoosiers are one of two teams to topple the Wildcats, but the two freshmen had strong performances in Indiana's thrilling 73-72 win on Dec. 10. Kidd-Gilchrist had 18 points and nine rebounds; Teague 15 points and five assists.

"That was so far, that was like a season ago, literally, four months ago. That was so long ago I had to watch the tape to remember anything," Calipari said. "But (Indiana) played well. One thing about it, we're better, but so are they."

"Both teams are way better than they were then."

Teague became the seventh player to be the team's leading scorer in his last game to help Kentucky reach the round of 16. He put together the best scoring night of his career with 24 points in an 87-71 victory over Iowa State on Saturday night.

ZACK KLEMMER

FLEMINGSBURG | Both Mason County and Fleming County played about like it was the second game of the season in their meeting on Tuesday.

And since the host Panthers had the last at-bat, they had the last chance to make something happen, and they took advantage of the final Royals miscue as Desmond McAdams drew a bases-loaded eighth-inning walk to score Brett

Fawns and walk off with an 8-7 victory.

Fleming sophomore Taylor Muse earned his first varsity win in relief, working the final three innings. McAdams had a game-high two RBI, Fawns scored three runs and Brady Saunders was 2-for-4 as the Panthers (1-1) won their home opener.

For Mason (1-1), Lukas Greenhill was 2-for-4 and

Prine, Cropper lead Ohio all-area girls' selections

IN VOTING BY AREA COACHES

Staff report

Senior Allison Prine was a do-everything player for Eastern Brown this season, and Bernie Cropper's Georgetown Lady G-Men continued their recent trend of winning nearly every night out.

Area coaches recognized both in recent balloting for the Ledger Independent all-area team. Prine garnered votes from all six area coaches north of the river, making her the leading vote-getter and player of the year, and Cropper led the balloting for coach of the year.

Georgetown, Peebles and Eastern each got three players onto the all-area first team. Casey Carter and Jesse Kidwell represented the Lady G-Men, Sidney Pell and Baylee Wallace were chosen from the Lady Indians, and Andrea Tracy joined Prine from the Lady Warriors.

Ripley's Niya Royal and Manchester's Hannah Rideout joined those six to comprise the first team.

The Lady Jays and West Union each had a pair of players chosen as honorable mention.

GREENHILL PITCHES MASON TO VICTORY

CHUCK HAMILTON
chuck.hamilton@lee.net

The crosstown Mason County-St. Patrick rivalry resumed on the softball field in front of a sun-splashed crowd at the Maysville-Mason County Recreation Park on Tuesday afternoon and the more experienced Lady Royals prevailed 10-0.

Mason senior pitcher Karissa

Greenhill limited the Lady Saints to three singles in her route-going performance that was limited to five innings due to the 10-run rule.

Greenhill displayed superb control on the unseasonably warm day by not issuing a base on balls and striking out three.

POLAR BEARS PUSH PAST ST. PATRICK 14-6

BROOKSVILLE | Bracken County put together a five-run third inning Tuesday night to down St. Patrick 14-6 and improve to 2-0 on the year.

With the score tied 4-all heading into the bottom of the third, Bracken's Phillip Jefferson and Connor Rigg drove in back-to-back runs and scored on Josh Cummins' two-run single before an out was recorded.

Cummins plated the fifth run of the inning when Eli Florer was caught in a run-down attempting to steal second. The Polar Bears added four insurance runs in the fourth and one in the sixth to pick up the win.

Travis Bishop got the win on the hill, scattering eight hits over 5 1-3 innings. Zach Williams and Jacob Houston were 3-for-5 with an RBI each to lead Bracken's 15-hit effort. Patton Kern was 3-for-4 with an RBI for the Saints. Jon Litzinger took the loss, going three innings and giving up 12 hits. — LI

LATE MONDAY: KENTUCKY WOMEN RALLY PAST GREEN BAY 65-62

AMES, Iowa | Keyla Snowden hit a jumper and two free throws in the final 18 seconds, and second-seeded Kentucky held off Green Bay 65-62 Monday night in the second round of the NCAA tournament.

Samarie Walker had 15 points and 13 rebounds and Snowden added 13 points for the Wildcats (27-6), who will face Gonzaga in the regional semifinals in Kingston, R.I.

Kentucky opened the game with a 21-6 run, then rallied after Green Bay erased a 17-point deficit and took a 62-61 lead with 1:57 left.

Snowden responded with a short jumper that rolled in after sitting on the rim, and Adrian Ritchie air-balled a 3-pointer with a second left.

Julie Wojta and Sarah Eichler each scored 16 points for Green Bay (31-2), which forced 34 turnovers. — AP

MANNING: HAPPY TO BE TEBOW'S TEAMMATE

DENVER | New Broncos quarterback Peyton Manning says he'd be happy to be Tim Tebow's teammate, "but if other opportunities are presented to him, I'm going to wish him the best."

Manning's arrival as the new quarterback in Denver, made official Tuesday, has put Tebow's status in limbo. Manning was asked if he discussed Tebow's future with the team while he was negotiating to join the Broncos.

He says those aren't his decisions and that "those conversations never came up."

But, the quarterback said: "I know what kind of player Tim Tebow is, what kind of person he is, what an awesome year it was. If Tim Tebow is here, I'm going to be the best teammate. If other opportunities are presented to him, I'm going to wish him the best." — AP

MILLWOOD PITCHES 5 INNINGS, MARINERS BEAT REDS 8-1

Xavier, Cincinnati get past brawl, into Sweet 16

JOE KAY
Associated Press

CINCINNATI | Punches flew. Blood dripped on the court. Two proud basketball programs saw their reputations stained in mere seconds last December, when Cincinnati and Xavier players lost their cool at the end of their game.

The moment would follow them everywhere for the next three months. The video was played countless times. The questions kept coming.

Finally, that's changing. By reaching the round of 16 in the NCAA tournament together, the cross-town rivals have finally gotten beyond the brawl.

"It's a good thing both teams are doing well now," Xavier point guard Tu Holloway said on Tuesday.

Far better than anyone expected three months ago, when four players from each team were suspended for the melee at the end of Xavier's 23-point win on its home court on Dec. 10. It became a national talking point and a turning point for both teams.

Both teams have gotten past the fallout and made it deep into tournament time. Cincinnati (26-10) plays Ohio State (29-7) in Boston on Thursday in a regional semifinal. Xavier (23-12) plays Baylor (29-7) in Atlanta on Friday.

The only time they think about the fight now is when it invariably comes up during interviews before NCAA tournament games. They don't mind the question as much as the implication in some of them.

"After a win, they try to make it out as if we didn't have that fight, we wouldn't be where we are now, that the reason we're playing so good is because of that," Cincinnati power forward Yancy Gates said on Tuesday. "Where really, the reason we're playing good is just that we're playing good now, we figured it out. I think that's what makes it so annoying."

Fair or not, the fight became the lens through which the rest of their seasons would be viewed.

Xavier was 8-0 and ranked No. 8 when Holloway, guard Mark Lyons and forward Dez Wells were among those suspended, costing the Musketeers their top three scorers and knocking everything out of sorts. They lost five of their next six games and had a tough time regaining their confidence and chemistry.

Plus, they seemed to be affected by the national attention, losing the toughness that Holloway and Lyons had bragged about after the Cincinnati game.

For the first time in six years, the Musketeers failed to win at least a share of the Atlantic 10 regular-season title.

When they got to the A-10 tournament, they knew they had to win some games to keep playing.

Xavier reached the A-10 final in Atlantic City, then knocked off Notre Dame and Lehigh in the NCAA tournament to reach the round of 16 for the fourth time in five years.

They're back in a familiar place, with their confidence restored.

"We played so free in Atlantic City because we knew we had so much against us," Holloway said. "We knew if we lost our opening game, we'd be in the NIT. We play free with our backs against the wall. We just started clicking."

By contrast, Cincinnati felt backed against a wall after the Dec. 10 loss, which left the Bearcats 8-3 and depleted on the front line. Gates and center Cheikh Mbodj received six-game suspensions, forcing coach Mick Cronin to turn to a four-guard offense.

Also, he stressed that the Bearcats had to become much tougher on defense. And, they had no margin for error left if they wanted to have a successful season.

"If we didn't do it, we were dead in the water," Cronin said on Tuesday. "We were in must-win games since Dec. 14 at Wright State."

BALANCE

FROM A7

"He was the main part of us winning," senior Darius Miller said. "He did a great job. He was even talking to us, being vocal, talking to us about what we needed to do. He was putting guys in great places on the floor and just being a great floor general."

Kentucky has been sharing the wealth offensively all season.

Doron Lamb has led Kentucky in scoring 10 times, freshman Anthony Davis nine, Terrence Jones seven, Kidd-Gilchrist six, Miller five and freshman Kyle Wiltjer once.

"They have a lot of multi-dimensional guys. They can score from three, they can score on the pull up and they can get to the rim," Crean said. "John is such a good coach for a lot of reasons, but I think more than ever this year, this team really shares the basketball. And those guys are just scratching the surface of where they're going to be."

Then there's Kentucky's stifling defense.

With four more blocks, Kentucky will surpass Connecticut's 2004 record of 315 blocks in a season thanks primarily to Davis, who has a nation's best 166. The Wildcats also lead Division I in field goal percentage defense at 37 percent.

"What we are is a good defensive team," Calipari said. "We're an athletic team. We're a driving team. If we make threes, we're a really strong team."

Calipari often says that all of his players averaged 25 points a game in high school and could score that many in college with a corresponding number of shots.

"They share," Calipari said. "I've got a good crew, a good group of guys."

All seven averaged at least 19.6 points in their respective senior years with Davis leading the way with 32 points, 22 rebounds and seven blocks as last year's consensus No. 1 recruit in Calipari's third straight top recruiting class.

Davis continues to win numerous accolades, becoming Kentucky's first winner of the Oscar Robertson Trophy on Tuesday, the national player of the year selected by the U.S. Basketball Writers Association.

"The recognition is nice, but I want to win the biggest award of them all and that's the national championship," Davis said. "I have to stay humble and keep working."

Calipari has maintained all along that they're only focused on their own games and not what's ahead in the bracket or the tournament, so he's not playing up the rematch with Crean or the Hoosiers.

"It's about how do we play our best. Let's not get too fancy. Let's not get too crazy," Calipari said. "This isn't like the trick them time. When you end up trying to trick at this time of the season, you know who you trick? Yourself. You trick yourself.

"We've established who we are. They've established who they are. We have a good idea how they'll play us. (Crean) knows how we're going to play them. Throw it up, and let's see what happens."

ADVICE

Men, women choose opposite sides in dinner table debate

DEAR ABBY: At a recent dinner party the men and women got into a heated debate about porn. The men said men love porn because it shows women enjoying sex with abandon. We women protest - ed that women who behave this way in real life are labeled “sluts” by both men and women. Do men not real- ize this makes no sense? If you can’t answer this, maybe your male readers can. — NO FAN OF PORN

DEAR NO FAN: Not be- ing an expert on the subject of pornography or why men enjoy it, I posed your question to a recognized expert — Larry Flynt. His answer is different than the one given by the men at the dinner party. He said that men love porn because men are aroused by the visual. Then he added that women are more turned on by the written word, which is why torrid romance novels are so popular.

P.S. Women who enjoy sex with abandon are not necessarily “sluts.” Many of them have high morals, are very happily married, and find it stimulating to watch porn with their husbands.

DEAR ABBY: I’m get- ting married this summer. I want to send an invitation to my brother, but I don’t want his live-in girlfriend to come. We used to be friends until I realized she was lying to me and using me. Now she’s with my brother, who is 23 years older than she is, which caused a rift in my relation- ship with him. We barely talk anymore.

I know I should be more understanding because it’s my brother’s life. He enjoys her company. But I find her hospitality fake — just like the smile she puts on. She’s not welcome at my wed- ding.

I want my brother there, but I’ll feel terrible if he feels alone. What’s the best way to handle this? Should I tell him verbally that only he is invited and not send an invitation? — WANTS A HAPPY WEDDING IN MASSACHUSETTS

DEAR WANTS A HAP- PY WEDDING: Telling your brother with whom you are no longer close that his live-in girlfriend isn’t welcome at your wedding is sure to go over like a lead balloon. If you want him to be there, accept that his girlfriend is part of the package deal. You can bank on the fact that he would feel alone without her, so plan on seating them some distance from your table at the reception. It will make her presence less painful for you.

DEAR ABBY: My boy- friend, “Justin,” and I are in our early 20s. We were high school sweethearts and we have a little girl together. Everything was going well until Justin went to a car lot to look for a car for his mother. He came home that day with a new one. My problem is he used the money he told me he was saving for my engagement ring as the down payment.

I am very hurt. I tried to seem happy and excited for him, but he knew I was upset and says I’m being “ridiculous.” At this rate, with the new car and the insurance for it almost doubled, I don’t see how he’ll have anything put away for a ring in the near future.

I have told Justin I don’t care about the size or the price of the ring, it’s the thought behind it that counts. Justin still says he wants to get me an expen- sive one.

I’m beginning to think he’s making excuses so he won’t have to propose to me anytime soon. What do you think? — ENGAGED- IN-WAITING IN OHIO

Kettle Campaign. She also reported on a new Veterans Museum in Morehead and encouraged members to visit this center.

The program for the meeting was presented by Claire Stephan and Jana Jordan with Prevent Child Abuse Kentucky. They shared the mission of their organization which is to prevent child abuse in our state. They shared facts about child abuse and how it affects our so- ciety. Much of their work is public awareness of the issues surrounding child abuse. They offer train- ings, printed materials, and other support to educate the public.

On Feb. 17, the club met for a dinner meeting at deSha’s Restaurant. A Conservation program was presented by local busi- ness owner, Bruce Carlson. His talk and slides were on beautification projects he has spear- headed in downtown Maysville in recent years. His first big project was the Bishop’s Table and Courtyard on Third Street. His most re- cent project that he shared its progress on was the Ace Hardware Building and the adjacent park on Second and Limestone Streets. He likes stone and this has played a major role in both projects. He will eventually be adding statues of Daniel Boone and Simon Kenton to the park with a fountain. Mr. Carlson shared the concerns of investing in the downtown and dealing with government restric- tions.

Uganda’s gays see progress in public opinion war

DESPITE PROPOSED ANTI-GAY BILL

RODNEY MUHUMUZA
Associated Press

KAMPALA, Uganda | Four years ago Frank Mugisha begged his colleagues to join him for his first demonstration in support of gay rights in Uganda. Only four came along.

This week, during a march against gender-based violence led by the gay advocacy group Sexual Minorities Uganda, the Ugandan activist saw more than 30 colleagues walk the streets of Kampala holding pro-gay posters.

“For us, this is a sign of progress,” Mugisha said, pointing to the white tarpaulin under which his group assembled after Monday’s hour-long march. “We are no longer afraid of anything. We even have a banner.”

Uganda’s homosexuals have been in the spotlight since a parliamentarian introduced a tough anti-gay bill in October 2009. World leaders condemned the proposed legislation, though many in Uganda applauded it.

Still, Mugisha carries a sense of optimism that is slowly germinating within the tightly knit gay community. The mere fact, Mugisha said, that Ugandans are now having a national conversation on gay rights is itself an achievement. In the past, the subject was taboo.

“We see a shift in public opinion, and I guess it’s because many Ugandans are talking about homosexuality a lot,” he said. “There are some local leaders who are now willing to meet and talk to us. The only problem we have is the belief people have that we are promoting homosexuality and recruiting children.”

Activists believe the controversial law will never pass, and now they are pursuing legal action they expect will make it too costly for people to be hostile to gays.

Sexual Minorities Uganda, with help from the New York-based advocacy group Center for Constitutional Rights, filed suit last week against a Massachusetts pastor in U.S. federal court. The suit accuses Scott Lively of being the intellectual force behind the anti-gay bill.

The complaint claims Lively issued a call in Uganda to fight against a “genocidal” and “pedophilic” gay movement, “which he likened to the Nazis and Rwandan murderers.” The suit asks for a judgment that his actions are illegal and violate international law and human rights.

Lively says his words were taken out of context and denies any wrongdoing.

Sexual Minorities Uganda believes that if it wins the suit, other American evangelicals it accuses of spreading anti-gay propaganda would stay away from Uganda.

“It’s been a long journey,” said Pepe Julian

Onziema, a gay activist who works with Mugisha. “The suit against Lively is something we had been brainstorming about since he came here in March 2009. We felt, ‘How can someone come from someplace and tell our people that we homosexuals are lesser citizens?’ We felt really insulted.”

The suit against Lively is part of wide-ranging legal action that local gay groups are considering against individuals they consider hostile to the rights of homosexuals. A similar suit is about to be filed at home against Simon Lokodo, the Ugandan ethics minister who personally broke up a gay conference recently, saying they were not authorized to meet.

Sexual Minorities Uganda also wants to bring to court David Bahati, the parliamentarian who introduced the anti-gay bill; three local pastors who championed the bill; and Lokodo’s predecessor.

Bahati’s original legislation proposed the death penalty for some gay acts. Bahati has said he has since dropped the death penalty provision, though the latest version of the bill has not been made public.

Gays in Uganda won a big victory in January 2011, when a Ugandan judge ruled that the unauthorized outing of homosexuals by a tabloid newspaper violated their right to privacy.

Carbon monoxide likely culprit in Pa. deaths

MARK SCOLFORO
Associated Press

FORKSTON, Pa. | State police say they now believe that carbon monoxide poisoning likely killed three cousins inside a mountain cabin in 2006 after new tests were conducted in the wake of a story by The Associated Press that raised questions about suspicions it might have been a triple homicide.

The AP story ran in early November 2011, several days before the fifth anniversary of their deaths, and helped prompt a renewed effort to look for answers to doubts about hospital test results and other issues in the initial investigation.

Investigators measured lethal levels of the gas during a pair of reenactments performed at the Forkston Mountain cabin using the same gasoline generator and portable space heaters that had been in place at the time.

The first reenactment was performed in November, and a second one last week confirmed the results regarding the deaths of David Grasc, Tony DiMartino and Pat Mahoney.

The AP story “was not the engine, but it certainly provided the lubricating oil to assist in moving things,” said Sgt. Anthony Manetta, a spokesman for the department.

David’s father, Al Grasc, said he planned to visit his son’s grave, feeling he could now rest in peace.

“The AP thing was the kicker,” he said. “That’s what caused all this to come to where it’s at.”

The investigation has not concluded, and significant questions remain about post-mortem tests done on the three men in the pulmonary laboratory of Moses Taylor Hospital in Scranton, tests that had caused authorities to rule out carbon monoxide poisoning.

Manetta said state police intend to eventually provide the results of their investigation to the Wyoming County coroner, who has never issued a cause or manner of death for the men. They were all in their 20s and from the Philadelphia area and southern

New Jersey.

“The most likely cause of their deaths was carbon monoxide poisoning,” Manetta said. “The facts are leading us further from homicide.”

The AP wrote about the deaths after the mothers of DiMartino and Mahoney lost a court battle to force the state police to reveal more details about the investigation. Their effort had been launched out of frustration and a belief that the official investigation had stalled.

“I truly believe that God sent me in that direction, to get the lawyer and just at least request samples and paperwork so I could look at something else I didn’t have,” Maureen Mahoney told the AP. “We just kept getting denied, denied, denied, and that’s when, lo and behold, it goes past your desk.”

The unsolved deaths created some painful rifts among the families, particularly after detectives focused in on David Grasc’s surviving brother Stephen, who was later convicted of leading a cocaine distribution ring centered in Cape May, N.J.

ONE DIRECTION, BIG TIME RUSH, THE WANTED, MORE BOY BANDS ARE POPULAR

NEW YORK | It seems like we can never say goodbye, bye, bye to boy bands.

A decade after 'N Sync and the Backstreet Boys dominated the entertainment world, boy bands have returned and are making a comeback.

One Direction, the British quintet that placed third on the U.K.'s "X Factor" in 2010, will see its album "Up All Night" debut high on Billboard's Top 200 albums chart this week. The Wanted, another U.K.-based quintet, is spending its second week at No. 4 on Billboard's Hot 100 singles chart with the jam "Glad You Came."

Big Time Rush, a four-member boy band that also has a hit Nickelodeon show readying its third season, recently wrapped a sold-out tour at New York's Radio City Music Hall, and will embark on a larger U.S. and Canadian trek this summer. And Mindless Behavior, formed by the man who discovered Lady Gaga — record executive Vincent Herbert — debuted at No. 2 on the R&B charts in late 2010 with its

PETS

Allergies: Airborne, fleas, food, contact

VET SAYS ALL DOG AND CAT BREEDS CAN GET ALLERGIES BUT THEY ARE HARD TO DIAGNOSE AND TREAT

SUE MANNING
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES | Allergies can cause misery for pets and humans alike. But allergies in animals are not always easy to diagnose and treat.

"I feel so bad because he can't tell me what's wrong," said Angela Duyao of Gilroy, 80 miles south of San Francisco. Harley, her 2-year-old Shih Tzu, has food and seasonal allergies.

It took Duyao, an administrative assistant, 18 months and over $1,000 to find out Harley was allergic to poultry and pollen.

All dogs and cats can get allergies, and the most common reaction is scratching, said veterinarian Donna Spector, an internal medicine specialist based in Deerfield, Ill.

"Allergies are a real head-banger. They are frustrating for vets, they're frustrating for clients and the dogs and cats itch like crazy so we know it is frustrating for them. Allergies are very challenging to diagnose accurately because it's a diagnosis of exclusion. It takes a lot of money and a lot of time. It takes a very dedicated owner," she said.

There are four kinds of pet allergies: airborne (tree, grass and weed pollen; mold, mildew and dust mites), fleas, food and contact (like carpeting or detergent). The most common pet allergy comes from fleas.

People and pets can cause each other problems: People can be allergic to pet hair or dander and pets can be allergic to products humans use.

Most pet allergies cause scratching. Some other symptoms include discoloration of hair between toes, rashes, open sores, watery eyes, ear infections, runny noses, vomiting and diarrhea, said Spector, a frequent guest on "The Ellen DeGeneres Show." She is a consultant to the pet food company co-owned by DeGeneres called Halo, Purely For Pets.

Spunky, an 8-year-old husky mix owned by pet sitter and photographer Ashley Niels, didn't have problems until his family moved to Austin, Texas.

In Texas, he licked himself raw, forming a hot spot on his back, Niels said. The vet put Spunky on antibiotics and gave him a steroid shot. "We didn't have the money to do allergy testing, so we tried diet trials," she said.

But it wasn't food. It was cedar dust and grasses.

"The poor dog lived in a cone for six months," Niels said.

Between the cone, a daily dose of anti-itch medicine and spray salmon in his food, Spunky's allergies became manageable. (Salmon can relieve itching and skin conditions in animals.) He is now off the cone, medicine and steroids.

Niels worries Spunky's allergies will flare up in the coming weeks, but she is ready with the cone if he needs it.

Among the three dogs, six cats, four rats and two ferrets in the Niels household, there is an 8-year-old cat named Zane who used to throw up every day.

In this March 15 photo, a four-year-old hairless cream point Sphynx, named Moshe Moshi, is held by her owner Carol Meir of Takoma Park, Md., at The Big Bad Woof, a pet supplies store, in Washington. Meir is managing her cat's allergies with a venison and pork diet and daily medication. She figures it cost her about $750 for vets and tests. Medicine is $250 a year.

Through trial and error, Niels found out he was allergic to poultry. Zane's diet doesn't have much variety these days, but he's stopped vomiting, Niels said.

Most pet owners will try to help their pets with allergies, Spector said. "The signs are so annoying and so significant, it rarely goes untreated. The scratching drives owners crazy."

Beyond money, it takes time. If a pet is hurting, the owner wants a quick fix and it can take months, going on years, to find the answer.

Flea allergies pose unique problems. "One flea can jump on a dog, bite it and keep it symptomatic for seven days," Spector said.

Carol Meir of Takoma Park, Md., spent 18 months experimenting with diet to cure digestive problems in her 4-year-old hairless cat Moshe Moshi.

Meir changed flavors and brands of cat food, cooked for him and took him to animal nutritionists. The conclusion: Moshe Moshi was allergic to poultry and wheat.

"It was easy to eliminate wheat from his diet, but it's really hard to eliminate poultry. You'd be surprised how many products have egg as an emulsifier," she said.

Meir is managing the cream point sphynx's allergies with a venison and pork diet and daily medication. She figures it cost her about $750 for vets and tests. Medicine is $250 a year.

"He is worth it. He is the sweetest cat," she said.

Meir was recently diagnosed with a dust mite allergy herself and all three of her cats will benefit, she said.

She's replacing everything from beds (hers and theirs) to carpets and having all air ducts cleaned. Duyao has always tried to do right by Harley too. He's got his own stroller and spends three days a week at doggie day care. She spent what it took to identify his allergies.

But a medicine mistake cost her $1,000 and nearly cost Harley his life.

Harley was taking over-the-counter children's allergy medicine on the recommendation of a vet. Duyao ran out one day so she cut up an adult pill.

"He reacted to something in it. It was very scary. He was jittery, his head was bobbing back and forth, his eyes were watery, he was salivating bad, his little heart was beating so fast," she said.

She got him to the vet where they put him on a charcoal IV to drain the poison.

When she picked him up from the vet's the next day, he was fine. "But it was a good lesson," she said.

album "(hash)1 Girl," and has toured with Janet Jackson and Justin Bieber, among others.

"It's just exploding," said Ernie D., the creative director and on-air personality for Radio Disney. "It's really amazing to see, especially on my end, hearing all the calls from the listeners. ... So that fever is definitely growing for sure."

It's reminiscent of a time when 'N Sync battled the Backstreet Boys as music's top act, selling millions of albums and concert tickets, thanks to the millions of girls who invested time, their parents' money and screamed pleas for their favorite boy band. 'N Sync and the Backstreet Boys, who rose to fame in the 1990s and carried that through the new millennium, were followed by others successful boy bands, such as 98 Degrees, O-Town and Dream Street.

Before that, it was New Edition who exploded on the scene in the 1980s, followed by the massive success of New Kids on the Block. And before that, there was the Jackson Five and the Osmonds, and so on.

The Jonas Brothers made it big in the mid-2000s with its hit Disney TV series, films and albums. They started to fade years later, though, as the oldest, Kevin, got married, and Joe and Nick launched solo careers.

But now, there are various boy bands releasing music simultaneously, helping drive each other to the top of the charts.

"It's giving us that little competition that makes us want to go further and excel further than we are right now," said 22-year-old Carlos Pena Jr. of Big Time Rush.

"It's cool to see more boy bands, but us, Mindless Behavior, we want to show the fans what we got," said Mindless Behavior's Prodigy, who is 15. Roc Royal and Princeton — both 14 — and Ray Ray, 15, round out the group.

Big Time Rush recently had its TV film, "Big Time Movie," reach over 13.1 million total viewers when it debuted on Nickelodeon two weeks ago. They also released an EP of the same name to accompany the film, which features cover versions of classic Beatles songs.

The group members said they weren't excited about being coined a "boy band" when they debuted in late 2009.

"We hated that term to start with," 21-year-old James Maslow said.

"Because the term hadn't come back yet," added Kendall Schmidt, 21. "We kind of feel like we paved the way for it to come back."

The foursome — which includes Logan Henderson — has released two albums. Their last tour featured One Direction as the opening act.

"We want to support other boy bands as well because we really want that whole genre to come back," Maslow said.

Other boy bands on the verge include Midnight Red, formed by RedOne, the producer behind Lady Gaga hits like "Just Dance," "Poker Face" and "Bad Romance." Midnight Run will release a single next month, and an album later this year. Beyoncé, who recently launched her production company Parkwood Entertainment, said she plans on putting together her own boy band. And the British quartet JLS, the runners-up on the U.K.'s "X Factor" in 2008, has released three top-selling albums in Europe, collecting five No. 1s; they have plans to release music in America.

"There's always going to be a market out there for teenage girls and girls in their early twenties that have this desire (for boy bands) ... and eventually they grow with the bands," said Howie Dorough of the Backstreet Boys, who recently released his solo debut, "Back to Me."

The Wanted, whose members range in age from 18 to 23, has released two albums in the United Kingdom; its U.S. debut is out on April 24. At last month's Brit Awards, The Wanted's "All Time Low" lost best British single to One Direction's "What Makes You Beautiful," currently No. 28 on the Billboard chart. One Direction, whose youngest member is 18 and oldest is 20, have signed up to do a Nickelodeon show and will perform at next month's Kids Choice Awards; Big Time Rush is also slated to perform.

Radio Disney's Ernie D. says the new crop of boy bands are finding success much faster than groups in the past.

"The way it's happening now, it's a little more sudden than last time. Because back then you had to build your fan base, get a following. Now with all social media, you have a fan base immediately ... (and) as soon as you nail that fan base, you're on the rise for sure," he said.

"Bands like One Direction and The Wanted, they're just coming out of nowhere and it's kind of taking everybody by surprise."

PLENTY TO GO AROUND

As a homeowner of Aberdeen, I can't believe what I am reading. Once again the council has made a tremendous blunder. There are two members who need to be kicked out immediately, never to return. You know who owns the property and now it will take years to sell this. It will take a while before this can be settled. We could have been on Brown County water. The idiot is the one whose last name starts with the letter C.

A TOUGH READ

I read the 2,000 pages on Obamacare at the library and it took me almost a week and half to read it. I read a little each day. I wonder how others read it. If they did, Obama care would never have come into existence.

THERE THEY GO AGAIN

As a residence of Aberdeen, Ohio I am embarrassed to hear all of the negative publicity that goes on at the council and committee meetings. This doesn't do the town any good at all. Looks like the council should all be fired and dismissed and another town take over. Where does this end?

FOUR FOR OHIO

State of Ohio has four teams in the final sixteen of the NCAA. This is a great record. We have almost half the field of all the teams this year. Kentucky should win it all. We will see.

POLITICAL COMMENTARY

High-flying corporate welfare

GEORGE WILL

Politicians, however, enjoy being drawn into largesse sweepstakes, which pretty much define the political profession today. So expect the bank to survive and even thrive, with its cap raised from $100 billion to $140 billion.

WASHINGTON — Sallie James was born in Australia on July 4, 1976, which suggests that Providence planned what happened 30 years later: She moved to Washington. She studies trade policy at the libertarian Cato Institute and her report “Time to X Out the Ex-Im Bank” illustrates how corporate welfare metastasizes as government tries to rectify the inevitable inequities of its constantly multiplying favoritisms. And while picking American winners, the Export-Import Bank creates American losers.

The bank, whose current reauthorization expires May 31, and which two months before that might hit the $100 billion cap on its loan exposure, subsidizes myriad export transactions with guaranteed loans to make U.S. exports cheaper. Mission creep is a metabolic urge of government agencies, but there may be mission gallop at the bank as it tries to correct the collateral damage it does to some U.S. companies, and as it is pushed to further politicize credit markets by mirroring the market-distorting policies of foreign governments.

The bank’s website says it helps “to level the playing field for U.S. exporters by matching the financing that other governments provide to their exporters.” But a leveler’s work is never done.

There is a reason critics have called Ex-Im “Boeing’s bank.” America’s biggest exporter is by far the biggest beneficiary of the bank’s activities. But when the bank’s interventions in financing help Boeing sell planes to China, India and other nations, it enhances the ability of those nations’ airlines to compete — often using discounted excess capacity — with U.S. international carriers.

The bank is only lightly constrained by the law that supposedly leashes it. The bank is required to consider “any serious adverse effect” on U.S. companies before supporting foreign purchasers in order to help other U.S. companies. But Richard B. Hirst, general counsel of Delta Air Lines, charges that the bank exempts 99.8 percent of its transactions from this requirement.

Hirst says that from 2005 to 2010, the bank “financed or guaranteed the financing for purchases of 634 Boeing aircraft” and in 2011 it “authorized over $11.4 billion in financing for foreign airlines to purchase Boeing aircraft.” Because airlines are capital intensive, subsidized loans give foreign carriers a competitive advantage over U.S. international carriers. Hirst says that if Delta had been eligible for similar subsidies, it could have saved approximately $100 million a year in financing costs,” and could have used that money to hire more workers “or even purchase additional aircraft from Boeing.”

To which Washington’s likely response will be: Fine, let’s expand the bank’s mandate. Speaking last month at a Boeing plant in Everett, Wash., President Obama pledged “to give American companies a fair shot by matching the unfair export financing that their competitors receive from other countries.” This looks like a promise to compound market distortions by further politicizing credit markets, while enunciating no limiting principle.

Obama is directing the bank to offer United Airlines a subsidy to match any subsidy Canada offers to persuade United to choose the Montreal-made Bombardier as United chooses between it, Boeing and Airbus. So American taxpayers will subsidize United to subsidize Boeing, which is already being subsidized in ways injurious to Delta and others.

There is an understandable urge to counter the subsidies that foreign governments give to companies competing with U.S. companies. The result, however, is an increasingly mercantilist world. And as Hirst’s argument indicates, it is difficult to prove that the net effect is to increase employment rather than just redistribute employment to different — and, inevitably, politically astute — companies and sectors.

As Sallie James says, public choice theory teaches that government favors flow to the politically connected. And favor-dispensing institutions such as the Export-Import Bank are dispensing incentives for private interests to develop lucrative political connections.

What next? Look for proposals to authorize the bank to subsidize U.S. manufacturers competing with foreign imports that have price advantages because of government subsidies. And so it goes, subsidies begetting counter-subsidies, as U.S. trade policy is increasingly set by foreign governments.

Politicians, however, enjoy being drawn into largesse sweepstakes, which pretty much define the political profession today. So expect the bank to survive and even thrive, with its cap raised from $100 billion to $140 billion. Congress’ normal reaction to wayward institutions is to extend their lives, expand their mandates and increase their money. In Washington, the penalty for slipping the leash of law is a longer leash and a larger purse.

Debt, deficit picture one massive downer

TOM PURCELL

We need policies that will unleash growth in America. We need broad-based tax reform to simplify taxes and encourage investment. We need leaders who aren’t afraid to lead. We need Americans to understand how serious our debt problem is. And we need them to press their legislators to come together to solve the problem.”

“It puts me in a bad mood, if you want to know the truth.”

“Ah, yes, you speak of recent comments by Indiana Gov. Mitch Daniels, reported at CNSNews.com. He articulates America’s debt and deficit problems better than anyone in politics today.”

“You got that right. Daniels says the rate at which we’re piling on debt will lead to our ruin — that no other outcome is mathematically possible.”

“Regrettably, that is true — and so obvious, a fifth-grader could figure it out. Consider: When George W. Bush assumed office, the national debt was $5.7 trillion. He nearly doubled it in eight years to $10.6 trillion.”

“Some fiscal conservative he turned out to be.”

“In 2002, Bush was the first to propose a $2 trillion budget. In 2008, he was the first to propose a $3 trillion budget. In six short years, spending soared by nearly 60 percent! Now President Obama wants to spend $3.8 trillion — nearly double what we spent a decade ago!”

“That doesn’t sound so good.”

“Sure, Obama inherited a horrible economy and high deficits, but the fact is he has grown our debt by more than $5 trillion in only three years. Our national debt now stands at $15.5 trillion!”

“You sure know how to make a man worry.”

“ABC’s Jake Tapper will surely make you worry all the more. He broke down America’s finances by comparing them to a typical family’s finances. If you remove eight zeros from Obama’s proposed $3.8 trillion budget, you have $38,000 in annual spending.”

“OK, I follow you.”

“The problem is we only have $29,000 in revenue. So we are racking up $9,000 in new debt every year.”

“That’s not so good.”

“Here’s what’s worse: We already have a $155,000 debt on our credit card. Paying off that amount of debt with $38,000 in income would be hard under any circumstances. But we’re not only not paying it off, we’re growing it by $175 a week!”

“The truth is painful, no doubt. Daniels argues it is very possible that the U.S. can pass a point of no return. We could get to a point where we are so indebted and so bankrupt that the payments on the debt alone will eat up most of the budget.”

“So what do we do to get out of this mess?”

“Despite all this talk about taxing the rich, Daniels says there is no way we can tax our way out of our fiscal mess. We need to reform entitlement programs, such as Medicare, which are growing at massive rates, but cuts alone will not fix our mess.”

“Then what will?”

“Massive economic growth. We need policies that will unleash growth in America. We need broad-based tax reform to simplify taxes and encourage investment. We need leaders who aren’t afraid to lead. We need Americans to understand how serious our debt problem is. And we need them to press their legislators to come together to solve the problem.”

“Good luck with that. More Americans are receiving government goodies now than are paying for them. They want the gravy train to keep rolling.”

“That is certainly cause for worry. French philosopher Alexis de Tocqueville predicted 176 years ago that ‘the American Republic will endure until the day Congress discovers that it can bribe the public with the public’s money.’ Haven’t we already passed this point?”

“Hey, after talking with you, I’m not in a bad mood anymore.”

“You’re not?”

“No, I’m in a horrendously miserable mood and worried sick about the future of my country.”

The bidding:

Pass 2 NT
Opening lead — queen of spades.

Consider this deal where West led the queen of spades against two notrump. East won the spade with the ace and thereupon returned the king of hearts! Without this startling play, declarer would have made the contract easily.

Let's suppose East had returned a club, which seems the natural thing to do. South would win with the ace, establish dummy's diamonds and score eight tricks consisting of four diamonds, two clubs, a spade and a heart. But the king-of-hearts return put an end to this threat, holding declarer to one diamond trick instead of four.

Declarer took the heart king with dummy's ace, then led a low diamond to the king and a second diamond to dummy's ten, West following with the three and four. Had East made the mistake of ducking the ten, South would have had his eighth trick. But East took the ace of diamonds and returned the ten of hearts, and South could score only seven tricks.

West's play of the three followed by the four indicated that he had started with exactly three diamonds. East therefore had no problem winning the second diamond because he knew South had only two cards in the suit.

Had West been dealt the doubleton 4-3 of diamonds, he would have played the four first and the three next. In that case, East would then have ducked the second round of diamonds, knowing that South had the remaining diamond.

Whether one plays first the three and then the four, or the four and then the three, might seem like splitting hairs, but the fact is that hairsplitting often makes the critical difference in the delicate art of defense.
